IN MEMORY

In sad but loving remembrance of our Father and Husband, Joel L. Guill, who passed away May 29, 1941.

More and more each day we miss you,
Friends think the wound is healed;
But few can know the sorrow,
That lies within hearts concealed.

A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memory still!
But death has left a lonliness,
The world can never fill.

Dear God, his loss is not our loss alone,
So many knew and loved him through the years,
So many hearts found happiness through him,
So many smiles born out of sorrow's tears.

Loving and kind, all his ways upright,
And to the end of his days sincere
In his heart and mind.
Beautiful memories he left behind.

Sadly missed by Wife, Children and Grandchildren.

Population in the North Decreased by 3 Million

WASHINGTON — Latest estimates on wartime shifts within civilian population, issued by the census bureau, give the picture of the period 1940-44. South and West increased nearly 4,000,000; North decreased nearly 3,000,000.

State-by-state figures were given as between April 1, 1940, and July 1, 1944. The figures represent the changes both in civilian population and military population within continental United States. Thus army camps and training centers in the South had a great effect on that region's population.

Because of a large excess of births over deaths, the total continental population increased from 131,669,275 to an estimated 132,563,271 in the four-year period, despite the sending of between 5 and 6 million men overseas.

Peas From Tut's Tomb Live Again

3,000-Year-Old Legumes Amaze Experts by Their Vitality and Beauty.

By CAPT. HARRY E. HAMMER
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

ORLANDO, FLA. — Outside a lonely office window at the air tactical center, within sight of Sugar and celestial navigation garden peas are growing. As is the case with most things AAFTAC, their peas are extraordinary.

The tall, healthy vines are loaded with purple pods, and their stems are thick and branching. Atop the pretty purple flowers wave in the Florida sunlight. The original from which these vines sprang, was placed by Egyptian priests in the tomb of King Tutankhamen 3,300 years ago.

Not least, this is the only theory that fits what facts are known about peas' origin.

Major W. Holden, commandant of the school of applied tactics at AAFTAC and present custodian of King Tut peas, is the man who has done most to stimulate scientific interest in the little vegetables. He mailed hundreds of seeds from two crops to experimental and research agencies desiring to experiment with the "new variety." As to the peas' return from the tomb, Colonel Holden makes no claims. He merely points out the window to where the peas are growing and remarks skeptics that so far no one has been able to offer one fact to disprove the story as given to him.

Found by Carter.

This is the history of the King Tut pea as compiled by Colonel Holden:

The original peas came from Howard Carter, who was a member of the Lord Carnarvon expedition to King Tut's tomb in 1922 and 1923. Carter found them in an urn in the tomb. They went to Lady Gilbert of Grimm's Dyke" Harrow Weald. Her head gardener gave some of the peas to Mr. A. A. Aldrige, who after obtaining a parcel of the peas gave two pods to his friend, Mr. Arthur Easton of Newport, R. I.

After raising one crop, Mr. Easton presented two of the pods to Maj. Walter D. Dyer, who planted them in his garden at Portsmouth, R. I. They proceeded to grow as if they had just come from the grocer's. The seeds from this crop, when planted the next year, bore profusely, and Major Dyer harvested about a pound and a half of fresh peas. Some of these he brought with him to the tactical center in Florida, where among a wide variety of military courses there is one on Jungle survival.

Immediately intrigued by the peas' background, the commandant of AFTAC's school of applied tactics, Col. Harlan W. Holden, took up agriculture. The season was far from being the prescribed one for pea planting, but Colonel Holden acted on the premise that sand is sand, whether in Egypt or Florida. He also had a hunch that peas which had pulled through three millennia in a tomb could stand off-season cultivation. On April 10, 1944, after the regular Florida pea crop was finished, he planted about 60 seeds from the Rhode Island germination in the sand-based soil just outside his office.

Any gardener in this part of the country will tell you that you can't raise peas in this area in the spring. As a matter of fact, they told Colonel Holden that; and while he patiently listened to them over the phone, he looked out the window at the healthy vines.

Bug and Disease Proof.

Hardly were the first sprouts out of the ground when they started trying to set an altitude record. In the first eight weeks they grew 5½ feet while the natives scratched puzzled heads. By the 4th of July Colonel Holden, who stand 6 feet, 2 inches himself, was looking up to count the budding pods at the tops of the vines.

Corp. Merle Tibbets, jungle survival non com, was fertilizing and watering the vines one day when he noticed another remarkable thing about these plants. Whereas the usual worms, green lice, and beetles continued to chew up surrounding vegetation, they spurned completely the Egyptian intruders. As one sergeant observed, perhaps the garden pests feared some kind of "King Tut curse," but leaving that theory aside the matter still was not entirely explained.

Meanwhile Colonel Holden noticed some more vines growing with zest in his garden. Then he remembered that a few worm-eaten, perforated peas from the same Rhode Island crop had been tossed out the door as worthless. Without any cultivation at all they too were doing fine. And—you guessed it—they were also immune from attack!

Bulgarians Cruel to Captives, Is Report

LONDON, ENGLAND. — British and American prisoners in Bulgaria before that country was granted an armistice were brutally treated at times and some were put to death, Sir James Grigg, war secretary, told commons recently. He said that the number killed "certainly was below 10." He did not say whether any were Americans.

Spinning Top Is Fatal War Tool

Gyroscope Used in Aircraft, Underwater Warfare and On Shipboard.

NEW YORK — Dr. Charles F. Green, consulting engineer of the General Electric company, declared that a child's toy—the spinning top or gyroscope—is a deadly war instrument that is used in underwater warfare, on shipboard and in aircraft.

Under water, the gyro is the means "which directs the deadly torpedo on its path to the battleship, destroyer or transport," Dr. Green said.

"On shipboard, it performs the vital job of indicating the vertical in spite of the roll and pitch of the vessel," he continued. "Such stable verticals or elements are precision gyro instruments having means for continuously correcting or 'erecting' the gyro to the vertical, to make them accurate enough to serve as a base from which guns may be fired at distant targets.

Acts as Stabilizer.

"Many other refinements must be included to render gunfire accurate on a rolling and pitching base. These gyro instruments serve also to control many items of equipment aboard, so that parts or elements are vertical or horizontal, as the case may require. Such stabilization makes the firing of guns possible at any position in the roll of the ship, and greatly increases fire power as well as accuracy of fire."

Dr. Green pointed out another use that has greatly aided in increasing the deadliness of gunfire. This characteristic of the gyro makes possible an accurate measure of the lead necessary for firing of guns from one airplane at another. The gunner in following, or tracking, his target through his sights causes a gyro to set up a proper lead angle, either in his sight or the computer, to make accurate and deadly gunfire by shooting ahead of the target.

Helps Navigate Ships.

According to Dr. Green, gyro compasses, when equipped with automatic steering equipment, become the means by which the fighting vessels of the world navies today are navigated in fair or foul weather. He said that all but the smallest aircraft are equipped today with directional gyros, which are used by the pilots to maintain their determined courses.

The directional gyro is one of the instruments used as directing elements in automatic pilots for aircraft, Dr. Green explained. When sensitive pickup devices are mounted on the gyro, means for transmitting the position of the gyro to power devices are provided, the rudder of the plane responds to the changes in position of the plane with respect to the gyro, or is steered by the gyro.

New uses for the gyroscope have been found, not only for war, but for more desirable peacetime uses, he concluded.

Churnless Butter Making Is Reported by Canadian

CALGARY, ALTA.—A revolutionary way of making butter without churning probably will gain wide use after the war, Dr. E. G. Hood, dairy research chief of the Canadian department of agriculture, said.

Addressing the manufacturers' section of the Alberta Dairy association, he quoted a statement from O. K. Burrows, public relations director of a large dairy equipment manufacturer, which said a process has been developed for the continuous manufacture of creamery butter without the use of a churn. Butter manufactured by this process was reported to have "perfect body and texture, normal color and desired spreadability."

Another dairy expert said the method is an application of the centrifugal principle used in a cream separator.

Engagement of U. S. Girl To Captive Stumps Army

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—Nineteen-year-old Eva Caprari, displaying a diamond ring, says she is engaged to marry an Italian prisoner of war now interned at Chambersburg, Pa.

Army authorities indicate the marriage might constitute a violation of the Geneva convention and edicts of the provost marshal general.

Officers of nearby Fort Slocum said a prisoner of war is supposed to be returned to his own country in the same status as when captured.

The prisoner is Cpl. Delfino Rosatti, 24, who was captured in Tunisia. Miss Caprari said she met him at the Chambersburg camp and had visited him several times. She has a brother in the army air forces and another was killed in a service accident.

AFTER THOUGHTS

All night I searched for things to say,
"It's warm in here," "The music's good,"
I wanted to be light and gay,
I never sparkle when I should.
But, now that he has said goodnight,
And I am getting into bed,
I think, as I put out the light,
Of all the things I might have said!

G.I. JIVE

Whether or not your heart is in the army (or the navy, the marine or the air corps), you're certainly full of G.I. tricks these days.

Service Stripes—Count the chevrons on a gal's raincoat sleeves and you'll know how many boys in the service she's writing to regularly. She paints on the chevrons with nail polish.

Happy New Ears—Buttons from his uniform make swoonderful earrings. Lots of gals wear one for the navy and one for the army. No fair playing favorites, you know.

Coin Collection—Almost as popular as your identification bracelets is your coin bracelet, made of coins from different countries sent to you by your brother—or somebody else's brother. You have them attached to a metal chain.

Hitler 'Yes Man' Is Paid Lavishly

Had Elaborately Furnished Home to Himself.

COLOGNE, GERMANY. — His neighbors all called him a "dirty Nazi" but he had 25 bathrooms in his house. It is a snug little cottage with a pipe organ, three pianos and a kitchen no bigger than the Astor hotel ballroom.

This Nazi big shot was "cooking with gas" as far as party prestige went, but his own modest meals were prepared on an electric stove with a dozen burners. It did nicely for the American battalion headquarters which used the house for a command post.

The owner had departed in haste, leaving behind a clutter of gold things which had come his way as a reward for his uninhibited collaboration with Adolf Hitler's war program.

The four floor rambling brick mansion was built only a few years ago. It bore a studious resemblance to the old castles which stud the Rhineland countryside and even the color of the bricks was chosen carefully to convey the impression of antiquity. A high brick fence enclosed the building and the landscaped grounds.

Inside his little dream bungalow, however, the owner, one of Germany's swastika profiteers, had gone to extreme expense to construct as modern and comfortable an ivory tower as his warborn millions of marks could buy. Into it he had channeled the wealth produced by great Rhineland mines and factories busy with war orders.

American doughboys have nullified his investment to a considerable extent. Only a few random bullets spanged through the windows but the owner didn't hang around to keep tab on his mines and factories or this 60-odd room hut by the Rhine. He skipped—but there are many mementos of his passing, including a few hundred thousand mark property mortgages which now look suspiciously like so much waste paper.

Estima'e that the cost of World War I to all nations will be over a trillion dollars.

Take My Word For It!

By FRANK COLBY

READERS' CORNER

From R. L. C., Springfield: I believe this to be the longest one-syllable word: scrunched. The longest all-vowel words are: aiaia and euouae.

From D. R. L., Anchorage: Inadequate means "not adequate," incomplete means "not complete," independent means "not dependent," but inflammable does not mean "not flammable." Why?

Answer: Also, unloosened does not mean "not loosened," and unraveled does not mean "not ravelled." English is like that.

From Mrs. W. J. R., Los Angeles: Why is it that we pay the milkman's bill with a check, and pay the waiter's check with a bill?

Answer: It is rather vice versa, isn't it?

Question: To settle a furious argument in our study club, please give the correct pronunciation of the name Omar Kayyam.—G. L.

Answer: Omar rhymes with Homer. The "Kh" of Khayyam has a guttural fricative sound like the "ch" of the German "ach." In my phonetic system, this sound is represented by the symbol: (ch). Say: OH-mer (ch)y-YAHM, rhyming with "by, my." Most speakers, however, give to "Kh" the sound of "k," as: ky-YAHM.

HOW MUCH TO MOVE A WAR?

AS SOON as we can, we'll bring to bear on the Japs all the additional might we've been using against Germany.

What will it cost, this Moving Day of War?

Estimate it in these terms: The job of moving millions of men from one front to another. Thousands of ships to carry the supplies of battle. Swarms of newtype aircraft to blast the path into enemy territory.

You can get an idea of the cost from the fact that Uncle Sam needs 7 billions from us in the mighty Seventh War Loan—now!
